

THE EMORY WHEEL

EMORY UNIVERSITY, GEORGIA

Thursday, September 25, 1952

New Graduate Humanities Institute To Open Here

A Graduate Institute of Liberal Arts in the humanities will be initiated at Emory this fall, Dean Howard Phillips of the Graduate school announced this week.

The Institute, an inter-departmental program leading to a Doctor of Philosophy degree, will operate within the Graduate school under the direction of Dr. Ernest C. Colwell, dean of the faculties.

"This is a major step in the program to extend and enrich graduate study at Emory," Dean Colwell said in an interview with The Wheel.

"I know of no parallel to the Institute's curriculum leading to the Ph.D.," he added.

The Institute will be launched on a limited-enrollment basis. It will begin this fall with a year-long seminar on "Freedom vs. Authority."

The seminar, occupying about two-thirds of the student's time, deals in the evolution of human society from classical to modern times.

It will investigate the question of freedom in government, business, the arts and in the individual through those times. "The subject matter is the problem of 'How is authority related to liberty?,' Dr. Colwell said.

Beyond the work of the seminar, each student will study in his particular field of interest under the guidance of a committee of faculty members.

The faculty of the Institute is drawn from the departments of Bible, psychology, romance languages, political science, history, English, classics and German, and from the School of Business Administration.

Dean Colwell said the primary objective of the curriculum is to teach the student to face present-day problems "with an understanding of how the problem has been faced in the past."

"We are going to make a program for the individual student in the light of his interests," he added, "and we hope to avoid the rigidity of a standard program in a special subject."

"We are primarily interested,"

Dr. Colwell said, "in educating college teachers who would instruct in subjects of general education."

The work of the seminar will be divided into three phases of Western civilization. The classical period will be investigated in the fall. In the winter quarter the late Middle Ages, the renaissance and the reformation will be the center of study. Modern times will be undertaken in the spring.

In addition to the documents and events which will be subjected to detailed analysis in the seminars, the student will read a prescribed bibliography to gain some knowl-

Yearbook Due Soon—Eubanks

The 1951-52 Campus will be available "in about a week," at the Campus office in the Alumni Memorial building, said George Eubanks, editor.

The yearbook will be mailed to all graduates who have left the campus, Eubanks stated.

All Emory students will be required to have their pictures taken for the Campus, he added.

Persons will be photographed by appointment beginning Oct. 13. A fee will be charged if the person desires to have the picture published in the Campus. Additional copies may be purchased, also.

Films Start Oct. 3

Emory's annual "Memorable Film" series, a weekly program of film classics of the past, will open on Friday, Oct. 3, John A. Griffin, director of community educational service, said this week.

Sponsored by the Emory Christian association, the series is presented free of charge at the Emory Hospital auditorium each Friday. Showings are at 5, 7, and 9 p.m.

The first presentation will be "Johnny Belinda," a 1949 production in which Jane Wyman won the Academy award for portraying a harshly-treated, affection-hungry deaf-mute.

"Rain," to be presented Oct. 10, stars Joan Crawford and Walter Huston in the story of Sadie Thompson, a fugitive from the red light district of Honolulu, and Alfred Davidson, a missionary with self-appointed powers of judgment for what he considers moral weakness and sin.

"Way Down East" (1920), starring Lillian Gish and Richard Barthelmess, will be shown Oct. 17.

"Chu Chin Chow" will be seen Oct. 24.

"The Invisible Man" (1933), featuring Claude Rains, Gloria Stuart, and William Harrigan, will be presented Oct. 31.

"Arsenic and Old Lace" (1944) is a comedy about two spinsters who make a hobby of dosing old men with poison. It will be shown Nov. 7. It stars Cary Grant, Raymond Massey and Peter Lorre.

"Stairway to Heaven" (1946), starring David Niven, Kim Hunter and Raymond Massey, is a fantasy telling of an injured RAF pilot's fight for life, which was helped by a courageous American girl and an understanding doctor. It will appear Nov. 14.

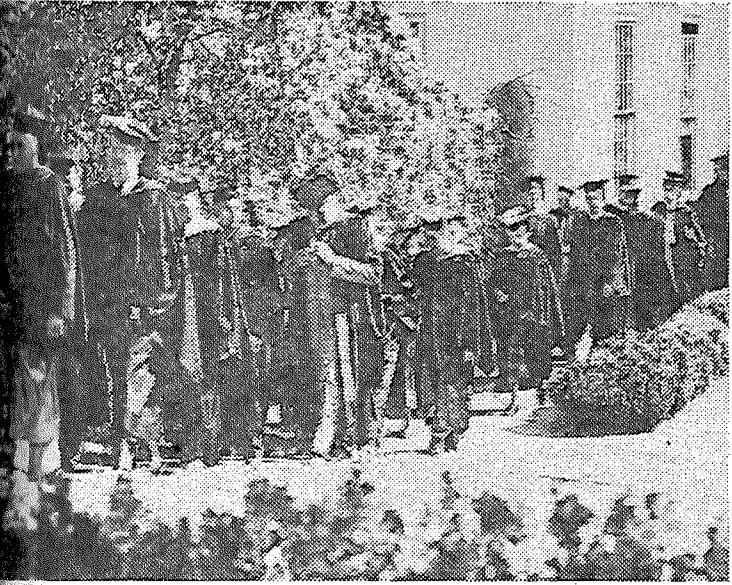

"The Mikado" (1939), Gilbert and Sullivan's classic operetta, is reproduced on the screen with its enchanting melodies, lyrics and story twists. It will be presented Nov. 21.

Vespers Held Daily

Student-led Vesper services, sponsored by the Emory Christian association, will be given Monday through Friday each week at the ECA conference room of the Alumni Memorial building.

Two services, each lasting 15 minutes, will be held daily at 6 and 6:30 p.m.

On Wednesdays a "Living Bible" film series will be presented in place of the regular services. This week's movie is entitled "Woman at the Well."

THE LONG WALK

Faculty marches for Convocation Day

Dr. White To Speak At Fall Convocation

Dr. Goodrich C. White, president of Emory University, will speak at the annual fall convocation on Oct. 2, Dr. J. Gordon Stipe, vice-president of the University, announced this week.

The convocation will be held at 10:15 a.m. in Glenn Memorial auditorium.

Convocation, said Dr. White, is held every year for the purposes of "starting the new year officially" and for "all members of the University to get together and feel their common interests."

He added that unity would be emphasized in the program and all students and faculty members will be urged to try to develop a sense of community.

He said all University operations—Dooley's Den, the faculty lounge, the cafeteria, the library and the Emory Grill—would be closed for the program.

"We're hoping for a big attendance," Dr. Stipe added, and he urged all students and members of the faculty to attend.

The speaker for last year's convocation was Dr. Ernest C. Colwell, at the time a visiting professor in Bible, and now Emory's dean of faculties.

The entire faculty and administration staffs will begin convocation with a procession.

The Glee club will present a selection.

Law Frosh End Orientation

Dean William M. Hepburn of the Lamar School of Law will speak at a banquet in the Alumni Memorial building tomorrow. The banquet will end a four-day Law school freshman orientation program.

The dinner will be held in the AMB dining room C at 12:15 p.m.

The orientation proceedings were opened Tuesday with an introductory talk by Bart Shea. The Student Bar association, the Law school student governing body, was explained by Graham Waitt. The Law school book store and "Obiter Dictum," student newspaper, were discussed by Ernie Tidwell and Bob Pennington.

On Wednesday, the Journal of Public Law was introduced by Editor Charley Bisset, the Georgia Bar Journal was explained by Waitt, and Ernie Friedman oriented the freshmen to the Case club.

Phi Delta Phi and Phi Alpha Delta, legal fraternities, were presented today by Bill O'Kelley and George Smith.

Dr. White became the 14th president of the University in 1942 when he succeeded Dr. Harvey Warren Cox.

In 1944, under Dr. White's leadership, the University started the "Chart of the Future" and brought Emory's total resources from $20,000,000 to $40,000,000.

Last year Emory once again launched a campaign to double its resources with Dr. White as president. The present goal is $80,000,000.

Dr. White was honored recently when Phi Beta Kappa, national honorary scholarship fraternity, elected him national president for the coming year.

Research Building To Be Finished Soon

Emory's newly constructed cancer research building will be finished and equipped in about six weeks, said Bryan L. Allan, director of operations for the University, this week.

Laboratory installations are nearly complete in the basement and on the first three floors, added Mr. Allan. Also the medical library will be transferred to the research center.

Concerning other construction on campus Allan said that the added width of the widened campus bridge could not be surfaced until the six inches of stabilizing rock had settled.

The bridge surface is being widened to approximately double its former size. An eight-foot sidewalk will be constructed on the southwest side of the bridge.

INSIDE

FRANK PIDCOCK discusses life on the Emory campus and tosses out a few bouquets to individuals and groups—page 4.

CAMPAIGN ISSUES and their effect on Emorites discussed by the editor—page 4.

THE GEOLOGY JACKASS, Senior El Supremo Learnedwerner McLester, is sold by the Geology department—page 5.

RUSH WEEK PARTIES planned by all 14 fraternities—page 2.

DEAN COLWELL

edge of the general history of the culture and period during which the documents were produced.

The student will satisfy all additional Graduate school requirements for the Ph.D.

The faculty members of the Institute are Dr. Colwell, acting director; George P. Cuttino, associate professor of history and secretary of the Institute; William A. Beardslee, assistant professor of Bible.

Joseph M. Conant, assistant professor of classics; John W. Dixon, history of art, Emory-Oxford; William F. Dukes, assistant professor of psychology, and Roland M. Frye, assistant professor of English.

Bruce R. Gordon, professor of romance languages; Charles D. Houndshell, assistant professor of political science; Ward Pafford, associate professor of English.

Robert Scranton, associate professor of classics; Sam Shiver, professor of German; Ernest Swanson, professor of business administration; Harvey Young, professor of history.

All Cars on Campus Must Be Registered

Students who bring their cars on campus, whether or not they live at Emory, are required to register them with the campus police in Alabama hall, said Capt. Johnny Johnson, chief of the Emory police. The speed limit on campus is 20 m.p.h.

Violators of traffic regulations will be brought before the Traffic court. The court is made up of students and faculty members.

Students who register their cars with the police are given window stickers which show the registration requirements have been met.